From The Desk of Principal

August taught us that true education goes beyond textbooks and examinations. It nurtures patriotism, cultural pride, devotion, creativity, discipline, and the spirit of teamwork. Through various celebrations and activities, we learned to respect our rich heritage, appreciate the values of our nation, and express ourselves with confidence and enthusiasm.

These experiences helped us develop leadership qualities, strengthen our sense of responsibility, and understand the importance of unity, cooperation, and mutual respect. They inspired us to become more confident, compassionate, responsible, and value-driven individuals who contribute positively to our school, society, and nation.

English Without Fear

- SHIVANI RAGHUVANSHI,
(H.O.D.) ENGLISH DEPARTMENT

Dear Students,

Never let the fear of making a mistake stop you from speaking English. If you hesitate because you think someone might laugh at you, remember this: English is a language you are learning, not a test of your intelligence.

You may pronounce a word incorrectly. You may frame a sentence imperfectly. You may pause while searching for the right words. It is okay. English is not your native language, and you are not expected to become perfect overnight. Speak. Make mistakes. Learn. Speak again. Every fluent speaker was once a beginner who was not afraid to sound imperfect.

So, the next time you have an English thought in your mind, do not silence it. Give it a voice. Because confidence does not come from speaking perfect English it comes from having the courage to speak.

English a Bridge to Connect

Education is not merely about gaining knowledge; it is a journey of discovering ourselves, building confidence, and understanding the world around us. As an English teacher, I believe that language is more than a subject—it is a bridge that connects thoughts, ideas, cultures, and people.

English gives students the confidence to express themselves, explore new perspectives, and communicate with the world. True learning, however, goes beyond textbooks and examinations. It encourages curiosity, creativity, critical thinking, and the courage to ask questions.

A classroom is a place where young minds learn not only lessons but also values. Every student possesses a unique talent and potential. As teachers, our role is to guide, inspire, and encourage students to discover their strengths.

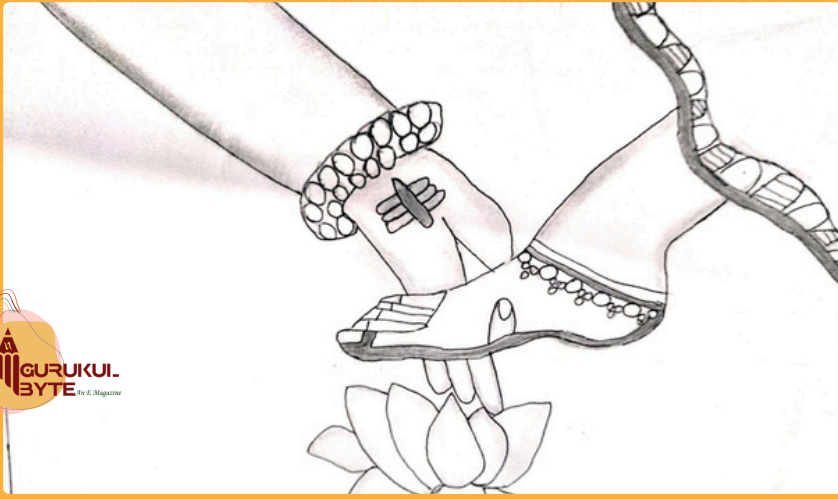

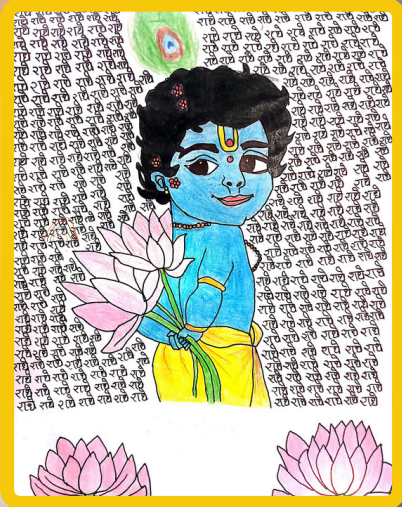

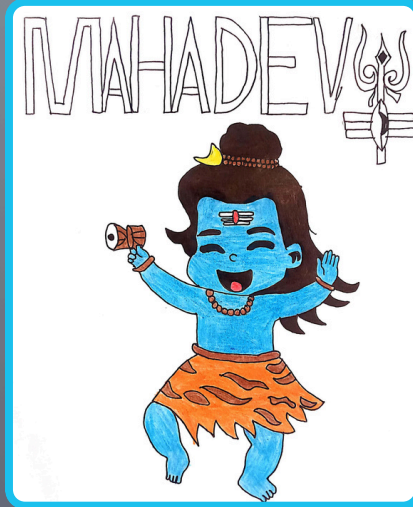

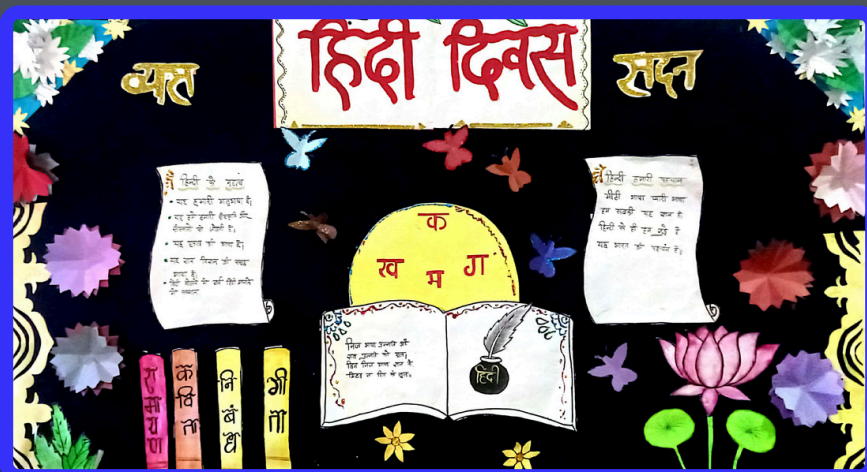

I encourage my students to read with curiosity, write with imagination, speak with confidence, and never fear mistakes. Every mistake is a lesson, and every effort is a step towards success.

Let us make learning a joyful journey filled with curiosity, kindness, creativity, and hope. "Education gives us knowledge, but learning gives us the courage to transform knowledge into action."
